

Hedwig's 10PM Intelligence Report

Saturday, 12 September 2026

3 Things I Absolutely Should Know Today

India doubles down on state-backed venture capital, approving $1.1B fund -- The Indian government approved a $1.1 billion state-backed venture capital program targeting startups in AI, advanced manufacturing, and deep tech sectors. Why you should care: Creates new funding opportunities for deep tech startups and signals government prioritization of AI infrastructure development. Impact: Medium. What to do: Monitor this fund's rollout if you're building in AI or deep tech spaces. Source: TechCrunch

CERT-In mandates 12-hour patching for internet-facing flaws -- India's Computer Emergency Response Team issued new guidelines requiring organizations to patch critical vulnerabilities in internet-exposed systems within 12 hours where feasible, citing AI-accelerated threat automation. Why you should care: As a Diploma IT student, you'll encounter these accelerated remediation windows in professional environments; understanding this timeline is now essential. Impact: High. What to do: Familiarize yourself with CERT-In advisory timelines and practice rapid patching workflows. Source: The Hacker News

Arm announces AGI CPU for agentic AI cloud era -- Arm unveiled the Arm AGI CPU, a new class of production-ready silicon built on the Arm Neoverse architecture designed for the agentic AI cloud era. Why you should care: This represents a fundamental shift in compute architecture that will affect everything from cloud infrastructure to edge devices you'll work with. Impact: High. What to do: Track Arm Neoverse roadmap developments as they'll shape future hardware choices in your projects. Source: Arm Newsroom